Mideast:

Summary:

Diplomatic correspondent Aluf Benn wrote in the independent, left-leaning Ha'aretz: "There is no doubt that Blair did not leave 10 Downing Street and his place in the front row of world leaders only to take care of repairing Ramallah's sewage system ... The man who has repeatedly declared that the Israeli-Palestinian conflict is the source of the problems between Islam and the West, and that this dispute can only be solved if a suitable mediator is found, will try his luck at concocting an agreement."

The conservative, independent Jerusalem Post editorialized: "It is pointless for the Arab states to continue to wait for the Palestinians to lead. It is the Arab states that led the Palestinians into war, before Israel's establishment and since, and it is the Arab states that must lead them to peace."

Block Quotes:

II. "Blair the Rock Star"

Diplomatic correspondent Aluf Benn wrote in the independent, left-leaning Ha'aretz (07/27): "Blair's visit left no doubt about it -- an international rock star is now dealing with the Israeli-Palestinian peace process. None of the previous personalities or emissaries enjoyed a similar standing, or the prestige and political savoir faire that Blair has brought with him to the position.... The major question that accompanied Blair's meetings with Israel's top political echelon concerned his intentions. Will he stick to the limited mandate he has been given by the Quartet ... or will he be pushed into genuine mediation between Prime Minister Ehud Olmert and the leaders of the Palestinian Authority, Mahmoud Abbas and Saleh Fayad, on the way to a final status solution -- and perhaps also Nobel Peace Prize?.... There is no doubt that Blair did not leave 10 Downing Street and his place in the front row of world leaders only to take care of repairing Ramallah's sewage system ... The man who has repeatedly declared that the Israeli-Palestinian conflict is the source of the problems between Islam and the West, and that this dispute can only be solved if a suitable mediator is found, will try his luck at concocting an agreement."

II. "Arabs Must Lead"

The conservative, independent Jerusalem Post editorialized (07/27): "With the important exceptions of the Egyptian and Jordanian peace treaties, and Mauritania's recognition of the Jewish state, the Arab states have been unwilling to lead the Palestinians towards peace with Israel. That example is obviously no longer enough. The Palestinians are weaker and more radicalized than ever.... It is pointless for the Arab states to continue to wait for the Palestinians to lead. It is the Arab states that led the Palestinians into war, before Israel's establishment and since, and it is the Arab states that must lead them to peace.... The West should be pushing all the Arab states, not just Egypt and Jordan, to begin normalizing relations with Israel and to abandon positions inconsistent with Israel's right to exist. It should go without saying that the West itself should be unabashedly rejecting such positions as well."
